A New Political Economy, by John M. Gregory, LL. D., Cincinnati; Van Antwerp, Bragg Co. 12 mo. pp. 394. A very hopeful indication of the present time is the increasing interest that is felt and shown in questions of political science and political philosophy. Once entirely ignored in our college curricula, or put off with a little formal instruction, by some overworked professor, in a department not at all related to them, history and political science are coming to receive the attention they deserve, and no subjects excite more general interest or, are attacked with more energy than these. Dr. Gregory has given, as the results of many years of teaching and thinking on Political Economy, a clear and in the main, sound presentation of the principles of this subject. Rejecting the almost universally accepted definition, The Science of Wealth,...
